

Fischer The Curv GT – 2018

This ski is designed for carving. Lengthwise, RC4 The Curv GT's carbon laminate muffles rebound, so the sharp-turning tail remains in contact with a carved arc to the very end. For 2018, all these Curv characteristics are replicated in an 80mm-waisted Frontside version, Fischer's RC4 The Curv GT. But it has an undeniable advantage when it bites the turn it carries you through the curve without any effort. It can go very fast without losing control and you feel safe.

Fischer The Curv DTX - 2018

Headlining the ski's materials composition are two .8-mm sheets of Titanal (thicker than normal) and Diagotex™ Torsion, an angled weave of carbon that muffles shocks and resists twist. Built for high speed at high edge angles, Fischer's RC4 The Curv DTX deploys a triple radius sidecut to accentuate turn entry and exit. This makes it exceptionally agile for such a strong, stable ski. While it's unabashedly made for experts, RC4 The Curv DTX lacks the imposing Booster plate that adorns its stablemate, and so it's a bit easier to bend at subsonic speeds.
